Argentina: New regulation for navigation

November 2019

Club correspondents Pandi Liquidadores have notified the Club of new regulations

REGINAVE (Maritime, River and Lake Navigation Regime) is the main regulatory body concerning navigation in Argentina, relating to safety of individuals, vessels and the environment. Although it has been in existence since 1973, it has been re-established in November 2019 with some significant changes. These changes include the ability of the Argentine Coast Guard to impose fines on foreign seafarers and shipowners for breaches of maritime and environmental laws. Additionally the level of fines has increased significantly. Fines are denoted in Unidades de Multa (UM – units of fine) and will be increased annually according to the rate of inflation. Also, the Argentinean authorities can now pursue fines for infringements of individual crewmembers against the owners.
